His train was to a smash-up several mouths and near Strasburg! He was indeed, and the fear of losing his position proved upon his mind, throwing him into disap despendency. Sunday morning he cent his wife and little daughter to church, telling them that he would follow in a few minutes. After their arrival at the caurch the little girl turned back to look for her father. She round him in the garden, his front cut from ear to ear. A razor was lying by his side. Staggering to his feet he managed to get back to the house, where belief acress the back to the house, where belief.

recognized that domestic antecedents free from scandal were a sine qua neat to the office of Chief Magistrate, and that only a man whose wife had in irreproachable past, and who, as far as respectability was concerned, was fitted to meet and to receive any of the Queens and Empresses visiting Paris in state during her busbands term of office, could be elected to the presidency. Mmc Leonic Leon, the devoted companion of Gamesta's life, and who played so important a role in his carrier, realized this, when she absolutely rejected his entreaties to legalize their relations by marriage, taking the ground that if he became the due band of one who, no matter how other merely attend the reception that follows. It is a difficult matter to avert such encounters, unless the clergy hold entirely aloof from society, which would be a loss to the latter. One can only regret that the recent dentification of the resentment of the resident state of the resentment of the regret that the recent feminine fashions should have been of a fature to call for the resentment of the Pope, as indicated by his edict.

President Fallieres has now entered upon the last twelve months of his seven years' term of office as Chief Magistrate of the French republic, and before he retires into private life will receive in Parls the state visit of King George and Queen Many and return their visit in London, both of these events taking place, according to present arrangements, during the course of the summer. It will be the second state visit of President Fallieres to the country their president fallieres to five the region of Edward VII., and next summer, as on the last occasion, he will be lodged in St. Jamess Palace.

President is accomplished merely by a joint meeting of the Senta and of the Chamber of Deputies, which assemble for the purpose in the Palace of Versailles, and the election of a French Fresident is accomplished merely by a joint meeting of the Senta and of the Chamber of Deputies, which assemble for the purpose in the Palace of Versailles, and after various ballots, which merely consume a few hours, somerally ending before nightfall in the cholee of a compromise candidate.

The latter is mostly an essegoing kindly man, who is regarded as amenable to the wishes of those who pull the political wires in France, while remaining more or less behind the seenes. Negative rather than positive virtues are sought in the Chief Magistrate, and the masterful statesment has but little chance of securing the company to the proposed and the masterful statesment has but little chance of securing the proposed and proposed and present and elected will be of irreproachials.
